

Words from the Director General

Kwe,

I hope you had the opportunity to enjoy some vacation time and that you are ready for another school year. The official signature of the Regional Education Agreement (REA) and our move to a new building has given all of us at the FNEC a real boost of energy.

Along with September comes the return to class and the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation in honour of residential school survivors and those who did not return as well as their families and communities. This day also coincides with Orange Shirt Day, and once again this year, the First Nations Education Council (FNEC) is taking part in raising awareness and distributing orange shirts in partnership with Bureau en Gros.

This September also brings the implementation of the recently signed Regional Education Agreement. One of the first challenges will be to hire personnel equipped to meet the real needs of schools. The FNEC team will continue to support member communities and work hard to increase access to higher education, and ensure the complete takeover of lifelong education by our nations.

Thank you for your interest in what we do. For all the latest news, follow us on our social media platforms. We hope you have a great fall season.
